Transportation environment (aircraft cargo holding area for pet) &lt;Temperature and humidity&gt;            Temperature and humidity is controlled inside the bulk cargo room by air-conditioning. However, the outside air and heat make cause temperatures to be higher than normal.            Pets are kept in shaded, air-conditioned areas until flight departure. However, temperature and humidity may change depending on the seasonal climate during loading, transport and unloading. &lt;Lights/Air pressure&gt;            During a flight, all illuminations inside the cargo holding room will be turned off. The air pressure in this area is set to 0.8 bar (roughly the pressure felt at the peak of 2000 meter mountain). The air pressure change may affect your pet ears or other reactions when ascending and descending.            The bulk cargo room is air-conditioned so that temperature and humidity is the same as inside the passenger cabin. &lt;Sounds and noises&gt;            Your pet may experience unfamiliar noises such as wind noise and mechanical noise during transportation. Other unfamiliar sounds can be other aircraft and ground vehicles during loading and unloading. &lt;Precautions in summer and winter&gt; <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Summer              As it is hot and humid, it is highly recommended to avoid traveling with your pet during the daytime, as outside temperatures may affect your pet.              Please make sure your pet is well hydrated before leaving your pet with us.              Please take particular caution when transporting puppies, elderly dogs and brachycephalic (snub-nosed) dog breeds that are sensitive to heat.</li> <li>• Winter              As outside temperatures can be cold and severe in winter, please exercise caution if your pet is sensitive to cold.</li> </ul>	<input type="checkbox"/>

I, _____ (print name) ,have read and confirmed the all above.
